

Q ELDVARM

Stories by the fire

In Swedish, the literal translation of Eldvarm is “fire-warm”. We chose this name not only because of the warmth that a fire creates, but also for the warmth of the connections that take place between people as they sit together and share stories.

MY LOVE FOR THE FIRE

Growing up in Scandinavia, fire was always important to me. My childhood home was heated through the winter with several interior fireplaces and in summer, family and friends gathered by the outdoor fireplace in my beloved grandparents' summer home in Torekov, southern Sweden.

My grandmother, Ninne, taught me about the deeper, timeless quality of beauty. She educated me in the art of creating an inviting home. The fireplace was often the centrepiece because it was where the family connected. To me, our outdoor fireplace in Torekov represents all of these positive values as well as many of the most meaningful times in my life. I carry on the tradition of gathering around the fireplace with my children, who love it just as much.

We Scandinavians have a unique relationship with light and fire, due to the dramatic contrast between our long, cold, dark winters and short summers of endless light. In ancient times, people worked outdoors all summer while the winters were spent together in front of the fire, telling stories while crafting, polishing and perfecting objects. I believe there is a strong connection between fire and the heritage of Nordic craft and design.

It is five years this September since I launched Eldvarm. What an amazing journey it has been so far, here's to the next five years.

OUR LOVE FOR NATURE

Scandinavia is home to a small population living on a huge land mass, we're surrounded by so much pristine untouched nature. We have the freedom to walk anywhere in nature, even if it is privately owned and we can even camp for a night or two. With this right, called "allmansrätten" in Swedish, comes responsibilities. We have an obligation to leave the environment as we found it, to not litter, to not damage wildlife or crops. Children in Scandinavia are taught from a very young age about this responsibility to nature, to leave it undisturbed, to keep it clean and beautiful.

These Scandinavian values of honouring and respecting nature run through our design and company. We find inspiration in nature and its beauty, and we respect nature throughout our production process. We use materials that will last over time, ones that withstand wear and tear because we believe that sustainability is also about durability.

OUR PRODUCTION & MATERIALS

All of our products are crafted by highly skilled professionals in a number of carefully selected production facilities in Europe that share our values of honesty, sustainability and supreme craftsmanship. We strive to create beautiful products that respect nature throughout the production process. We use ethically sourced, natural materials of the highest quality.

One of our efforts is to produce as little waste as possible. Leather is normally a product where there is a lot of waste, due to its irregular shape as well as damages. We use a computer programme that calculates the best way to cut the leather so that there is as little waste as possible. Both leather and wood, being natural materials, have so-called “defects”. At Eldvarm, we think that these imperfections tell a story and give interesting details to the product.

We have also taken into consideration the impact that the environment has on our products and we pride ourselves on creating durable products. We encourage our customers to embrace the change as the tools show signs of usage, as the products take on a natural sheen, as they begin to mold into the hands that hold them... as they begin to show their stories by the fire.

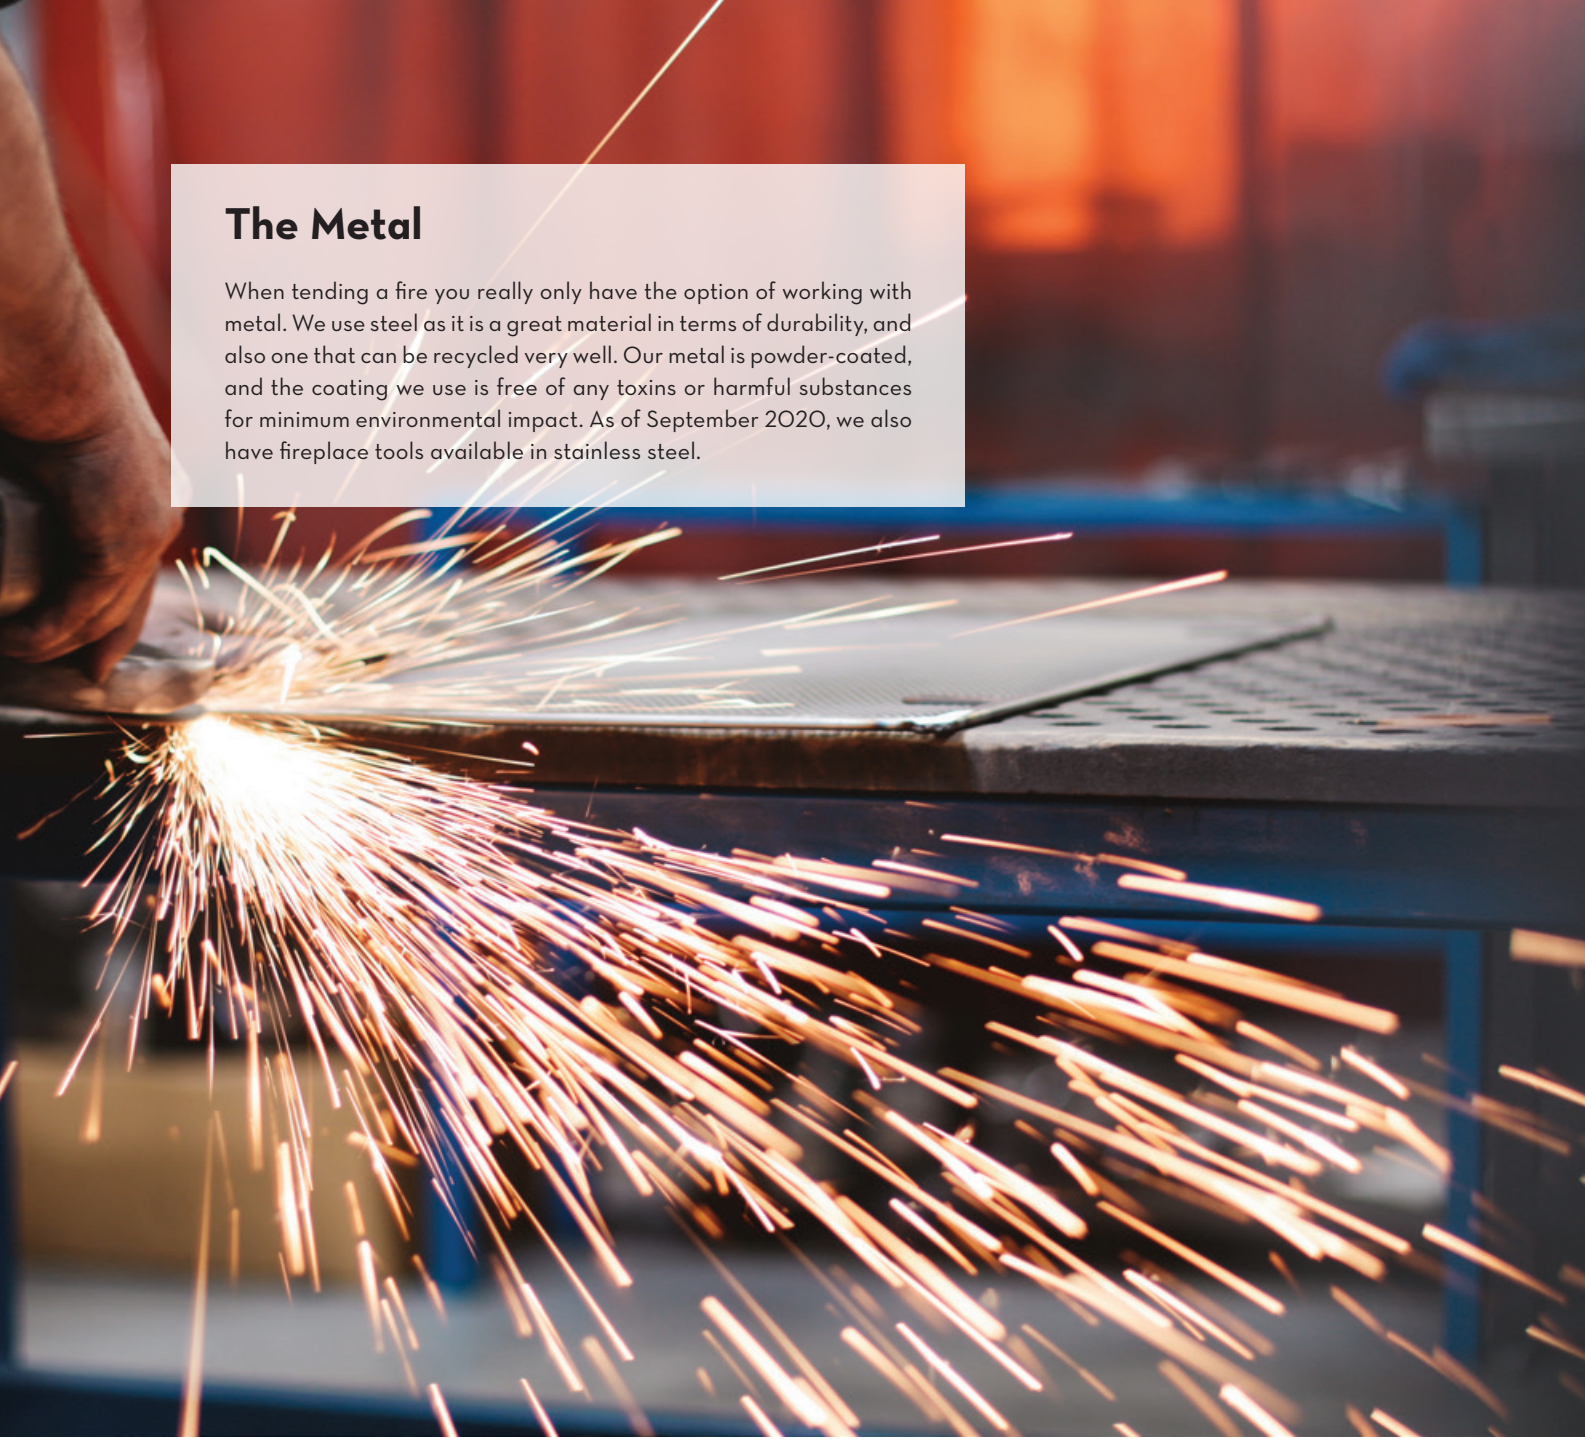

The Brush

Our brushes are produced on traditional machines at a third-generation family business in Nantes, France where they have been making brushes since 1947. Most brushes for fireplaces use synthetic fibre, while ours are 100% natural. The bristles are a unique blend of horse hair, the traditional material for fireplace accessories, and Tampico from the Agave cactus. Together they ensure that the brush not only looks good, but will last over time.

The Wood

We source our wood from certified sustainably managed forests in France (beech) and the United States (walnut). We love the natural beauty of wood and have therefore left some surfaces untreated. These will age naturally with use, producing a beautiful patina over time.

The Metal

When tending a fire you really only have the option of working with metal. We use steel as it is a great material in terms of durability, and also one that can be recycled very well. Our metal is powder-coated, and the coating we use is free of any toxins or harmful substances for minimum environmental impact. As of September 2020, we also have fireplace tools available in stainless steel.

The Details

All metal screws and small details are custom-made, in either solid brass, black anodised aluminium or brushed stainless steel. We believe this adds refined elegance to the products.

The Leather

We use vegetable-tanned leather, which is certified organic and free from chrome or other harmful chemicals. This ancient technique produces a leather that has natural variations in colour. The leather, especially lighter tones, will darken over time and obtain that much wanted patina of used leather.

OUR DESIGN

Our design is built on the Scandinavian values of elegance and simplicity, combined with a sophisticated and modern international touch.

Eldvarm’s mission is to make products that hold their own (we believe an empty wood basket should be as beautiful to look at as a filled one), that are highly functional (we are convinced we have the best designed fire tool set on the market) and that are long lasting.

All the products in this current catalogue were created and developed in close collaboration between the celebrated Swedish designer, Emma Olbers and Eldvarm founder and CEO, Louise Varre.

About our designer

Emma Olbers prides herself on being “a furniture designer with an eco heart”, making her a natural fit for Eldvarm. Her goal, since she began designing some 20 years ago, has always been to design quality products that are sustainable. For Olbers, products should be made from natural materials, be carefully produced and last for a long time.

Born on a farm on the west coast of Sweden in 1972, Olbers is a graduate of Beckmans College of Design in Stockholm, as well as the Sustainable Fashion Academy. She opened her own studio in 1999, and over the years she has collaborated with a number of different furniture producers, from huge brands including Ikea to small start-ups. Olbers has won many awards for her designs, including Sustainability Designer of the Year - Residence Magazine 2018, Designer of the Year - RUM Design 2019, and Designer of the Year - ELLE Deco 2020.

We share a love for beautifully designed products that are functional and respect nature.

EMMA COMPANION SET

Functional and beautiful, this is the ultimate set of fire tools. Each tool has its own dimensions, but is part of a coherent fire tool set that is a pleasure to use, will last for a long time and looks stunning next to any fireplace. Usually, a set has four equally long tools, where the poker is the perfect length, but the shovel is impossible to use because the handle is too long, the blade too small, and you end up with ashes everywhere. We took each tool, considered the job it had to do, and designed it accordingly.

EMMA TOOLS

The Shovel & Brush

Our special blend for the brush contains horse hair and Tampico (the root of the Agave cactus), a durable blend to clean your fireplace.

The shovel has a blade that is wide and deep enough to easily empty the ashes without spilling any on the floor.

Blow Poker

Louise's favourite product, the blow poker can be used not only to poke and manage the fire, but also in place of a bellows. Simply blow into the brass mouthpiece at the end to get the fire going.

EMMA WALL

This is an alternative to our Emma Companion Set, where the tools can be hung on the wall. The set contains three hooks, along with matching Blow Poker, Shovel and Brush. Each set is beautiful and highly functional, with the choice to either discretely store or proudly display your tools.

EMMA BASKET

The basket is designed for stylish firewood storage but is truly multi-purpose. The basket can be used to store anything in your home – towels, magazines, toys, even plants. When it comes to storing wood, the straight side lines allow you to fill the basket with more logs than you might imagine and the solid design means that all of the small bits of bark remain inside. It is quite heavy and isn't designed to be used for collecting or carrying wood. But we think it is too beautiful and elegant for that purpose anyway. The handle is for moving the basket around the fireplace. The weight is due to its very good quality steel body, ensuring its shape lasts over time.

EMMA LANTERN

The idea behind this elegant lantern was born one summer’s evening, as Eldvarm founder Louise sat with friends by the outdoor fireplace in her family’s summerhouse in southern Sweden. One friend, who loved our basket Emma, was convinced that the same shape could also be utilised for a lantern. Although it was designed to be used with a candle, our lantern can also be used as a flower or plant pot (keep the outer pot and don’t fill with water above the lower edge of the leather) or a small bowl if you remove the glass. We love to mix and match the colours.

EMMA SCREEN

Elegance and utility go hand in hand with this classic freestanding fireplace screen. Perfect for keeping in jumping sparks and hot embers, you can enjoy the charm of your open fire without any of the drawbacks. We were also mindful that a fireplace isn't always lit, so we designed a screen that is beautiful without demanding attention, with or without a fire flickering behind it. When the fireplace is empty, it adds charm to a room with its elegant curves and very Scandinavian design expression.

NINNE BENCH

Our first piece of furniture, this bench is named after Louise's grandmother Ninne who was a huge inspiration to her growing up. The bench was conceived for wood, as an alternative to vertical wood storage. Like many of our other products, we wanted to design a product that looks beautiful on its own, regardless of whether it's completely empty or filled with wood. We ended up with an incredibly versatile product that can store anything you like, not just logs, and it can also be used as seating for two people.

THIS IS ELDVARM

Eldvarm is centred around the fireplace, firmly rooted in Scandinavian tradition and culture.

We love fire — and all the warm, inspiring feelings associated with relaxing and socialising by a fireplace. Humans have gathered and told stories around fires since the beginning of our time. In the ever increasing pace of modern life, our need for moments of tranquility and togetherness is greater than ever.

Our mission at Eldvarm is to further enhance those precious pauses in everyday life through our collection of fireplace accessories, furniture and decorative objects.
